Richard Grand Legal Writing Competition
Fall 2017

Over the course of his five-decade-long career, Tucson attorney Richard Grand worked tirelessly to achieve justice for his clients. Many newspaper and magazine articles have been written about Mr. Grand’s remarkable courtroom record. During his life, Mr. Grand sought to share his insights and experiences with others, both through the creation of legal societies for other personal injury attorneys and by investing in the lives of law students.

One of the ways that Mr. Grand invested in law students was through the creation and sponsorship of this writing competition in 2000. He also created the Richard Grand Damages Argument Competition. During his lifetime, the advertisements for those competitions often included his “Thoughts for Law Students,” which offered pithy advice to students on the practice of law and on life. Some of these “thoughts” were published in his obituary and ranged from “If you don’t like learning, don’t become a lawyer” to “sit on a hard chair and sweat.”

We can learn much from the advice of those who precede us. For this competition, you are to write a letter of advice to future law students (or students in your degree program if you are MLS, LLM, or SJD student). In your essay please provide advice and explain why this advice is valuable or important. For example, feel free to share what experiences have led you to offer this advice.

You have complete discretion as to what type of advice you give, with the following restrictions:

- The advice must relate to things about which you have personal knowledge, experience, or have impacted you in a direct way. In other words, this is not a research project. It is a personal essay.

- A good portion of the essay should be written in the first person. This is a personal essay, so you will be writing about your own personal thoughts, personal opinions, and personal experiences. Of course, some parts—maybe even significant parts—of the essay may be in the second or third person, but the essay should largely be written from your own personal point of view.

- The essay must be your own original work prepared exclusively for the competition. You may not enter work that was written—in part or in full—prior to the beginning of this competition.
• The essay may not be a work of fiction. Please write about real events, real people, real observations, and your real point of view.

This is a writing competition. Feel free to use storytelling, metaphor, analogy, literary references, and other techniques to capture and persuade your audience. We encourage you to be interesting, to communicate a point of view, to educate your reader, to tell a compelling story, to turn a phrase here and there. Moreover, we are not looking for one particular writing style. Your topic and your perspective will inform much of how you approach writing this piece.

We anticipate that you will not cite any authorities or court opinions in your personal essay. If for some reason, however, you do discuss a case or an authority of some sort, you need not use formal Bluebook or ALWD-style citation. It is perfectly acceptable to identify your case without any formal citation, i.e. “In 1966, nearly twenty years before I was born, the United States Supreme Court decided the landmark case of Miranda v. Arizona.” If you think, that your reader might not be familiar with a particular court opinion, you may include the citation either in the text or in a footnote.

All entries must be submitted anonymously, using a competition number and not a name. To obtain your competition number, please send an email to martinds@email.arizona.edu. In your email, please state that you are participating in the Richard Grand Legal Writing Competition and that you would like a competition number. Include your name, phone number, and whether you are a 1L, 2L, 3L, MLS, LLM, or SJD student. You will receive your competition number by email. Please place this number on every page of your entry. We recommend that you obtain your number in the first day or two of the competition. That way, if we need to send an e-mail with a clarification or correction, we will be able to reach you.

Note: If for any reason you are unable to obtain a competition number before the November 6 submission deadline, just email your entry on time. In your email, ask for a competition number. One will be assigned to you, and that number will be added to every page of your entry. The staff will make sure that your entry is transmitted to the judges anonymously, with no trace of your identity on the entry.

All entries must be typed and double-spaced, in 13-point font or larger. Block quotes may be single-spaced. Margins must be one inch or larger on all four sides. Please number the pages at the bottom. The maximum length of the paper is 2000 words, including any headings or footnotes. But please don’t feel compelled to meet the maximum word limit. Write just as many words as necessary to craft a complete, interesting essay.
Examples of personal essays abound. You can find them on the web, in newspapers, in magazines, in books, etc. Below are a few links to some personal essays that have been posted on the web.
